Top 10 Teaching Points

1

By demonstrating your expertise and credibility in your field, you can establish yourself as a trusted source of information and advice for your team.

2

Volunteer your existing knowledge and insights to empower those around you, fostering a culture of learning and growth.

3

When building and maintaining credibility as a leader, it's important that you remain consistent, genuine, and open-minded.

4

When you share important knowledge instead of withholding it, people find you especially credible and trustworthy.

5

Influential leadership makes its mark in advance of and after the meeting as well, not just during.

6

Skilled influential leaders know how to command a room.

7

Meetings veer off-track when the group's focus is fractured. Influential leaders know how to refocus a room on the task at hand.

8

Influential leaders are people, too, and can be beset by all the same emotions as the team members they're leading.

9

When your team sees someone they respect admit to mistakes, they'll be able to accept their own more readily.

10

Always try to point out the positives to your team, even in times of transition and adversity.
